King Hussein back from 1 day visit to Damascus

AMMAN (R). — His Majesty King Hussein returned to Amman Wednesday night from a one-day visit to Syria.

The King and President Hafez Assad discussed the general Arab situation and bilateral relations, according to officials here.

The King was accompanied by Prime Minister Mudar Badran, the Chief of the Royal Court, Sharif Abdul Hamid Sharaf and Court Minister Amer Khammash. Official sources in the Syrian capital said that King Hussein and President Assad agreed that Arab solidarity should be strengthened and Arab potentials mobilised to recover the "usurped Arab rights".

As the two leaders met, their prime ministers and their delegations held parallel talks, but nn details were available.
Sources close to the Jordanian monarch said the King would shortly visit Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

Vance will visit China

WASHINGTON, June 22 (R). - U.S. Secretary of State Cy-rus Vance will visit China from August 22 to 26, the State De-partment announced today.

He will also stop in Japan for one or two days on his way back from Peking, a spokesman said.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the purpose of the Peking visit was "to further our conversations in light of the Shanghai communique toward normalising relations." The Shanghai communique was signed by former President Ri-chard Nixon in 1972.

He said Mr. Vance would not visit any other countries besi-des China and Japan. He said he did not know whether So-uth Korea had requested a visit at that time.

Soviet Union, France pledge to defend human rights, warn against nuclear war

PARIS, June 22 (AFP). — The Soviet Union and France today pledged, themselves to the defence of human rights and implicitly warned that a nuclear holocaust was the alternative to detente.

The pledge and warning followed three days of exchanges of views -- some of them clearly differing -- between President Giscard d'Estaing and Soviet leader Leonld Brezhnev. The two countries stressed that respect for buman rights and basic freedoms, at the level of states and individuals, was one of the basic elements of detente. They warned: "In the higher interest of mankind, it is imperative that states and peo-ples abandon policies based on mistrust, rivalry and tension and that they recognise that differences over the concept and organisation of sothey are united in the face of perils which threaten

Detente, and its alternative, were the subject of one of three documents signed at Rambouillet chateau, near here, where the talks took place. The other two were a statement on nverall policies and on halting the spread of nuclear weapons.

Three economic documents were also signed and the two countries undertook tn treble trade by the early 1980's.

Yesterday, President Giscard d'Estaing stressed that "mod-eration in the ideological struggle" was ooe of four conditions to detente, but in the text on detente this came out as a pledge to "maintain a fa-vourable climate in relations between states".

Both sides called for an end to the use of force and threats as a means of influencing other countries, and a halt to the arms race.

The 11-page general policy document, which also took in detente, gave a place of its own to Africa and said the two countries attached great importadeeply committed to the 'full and dynamic" application of the peoples to decide their own fu-ture without nutside interfere-convening of the Geneva conference on the Middle East, with the participation of repre-sentatives of the Palestinian On disarmament, France and the Soviet Union backed the idea of a world conference and said they hoped the necessary conditions for it to be beld, particularly the participation of all the nuclear powers, would soon be met. The two countries said they recognised the importance to some nations of nuclear ene rgy and sald they would continue to export nuclear material and technology in keeping with international agreements they had made.

Labour Party retains control over Histadrut

TEL AVIV, Juna 22 (R). — Israel's powerful trade unions, still under the control of the opposition Labour Party after special elections, warned new Prime Minister Menachem Begin today against implementing his conservative ideas for solving the country's economic

Mr. Begin's rightwing Likud government, which hopes to introduce more free enterprise into the largely controlled econnmy, was rocked by the resu-Its of the elections for authority over the Histadrut trades union

The Histadrut nwns or controls nearly one-third of the Israeli economy. Almost all salaried workers and their families are linked to it through pension and bealth funds.

Mr. Meshel spoke after the Labour Party made a stunning comeback yesterday in the Histadrut balloting -- just over a month after its 29-year rule ended in a crushing general election defeat.

Dayan: Israel will not give of West Bank

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM, June 22 (R). — Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said today the new Israeli government would seek a peace with Arab states that did not invnlve "partition-ing" the occupied West Bank or handing it back to Jordan.

Speaking on Israeli Radio for the first time since taking up his new portfolio, Mr. Dayan said the major problem facing Israel was Arab demands for a total evacuation of the West Bank which Israeli troops oc-cupied during the June 1967 Middle East war.

Brzezinski proposes West Bank internal autonomy within Jordan

TEL AVIV, June 22 (AFP). -White House Security Affairs advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski has proposed a solutinn to the Middle East conflict which would give Palestinians internal autonomy in a demilitarized West Bank within the Jordanian state, the daily Haaretz reported here today.

The newspaper's Washington correspondent said the propo-sal would allow Israel a limited military presence on the West Bank and the Golan region but would ban any Israeli political presence or set-

Israeli experts recently learned of the plan, Haaretz said, which would give the Kingdom of Jordan two provinces -- one of which would be set up by the Palestinians in West Bank territories now occupied by Is-rael and would be granted internal autonomy.

Under the Brzezinski plan, the Palestinian province would be demilitarized and Jordan would maintain responsibility for its internal security althounnly police forces would gh nnly police for he stationed there.

Jordan would also be granted a free port at Haifa, Haa-

Jerusalem would remain the unified capital of Israel, it said, although it could also be the administrative capital of the Palestinian province. An interreligion council would assume control of boly places in the Mr. Brzezinski reportedly pr oposed that Gaza become part of the Palestinian province, and Jewish settlements in the area evacuated. Israel would also evacuate the Sinai in three stages, retu-roing in the end to the 1967 borders. Egyptian troops would be banned from going beyond a certain line in the Sinai. United Nations forces would meanwhile remain in the sector. The port of Sharm Al Sheikh, held by Israel and located near the mouth of the Gulf nf Suez, no longer has strategic importance since the Arabs control the Bab Al Mandeb straits at the entrance to the Red Sea.

The plan would return the Golan to Syria in three stages over two years. U.N. forces would remain for an indefinite period in the demilitarized area and Israel would be allowed to send in patrols.

The Haaretz correspondant said most members of the American Congress considered friendly to Israel generally agreed with the project.

In Tel Aviv, Rabbi Shlomo Goren told reporters on his return from a trip to the United States and Canada that he be-lieved President Carter would stop referring to an independent Palestinian homeland from now on

He said that President Carter reiterated U.S. commltment tn Israel and said a solution to the Palestinian issue should be sought in the context of a Palestinian homeland within Jurdan.

He added that President Carter bad assured him he did not expect an Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territories to the pre-1967 borders.

MEA reelects board of directors

The General Assembly of MEA (the Middle East Airline) unanimously reelected its previous Board of Directors and its Chairman, Sheikh Najeeb Alamuddin, to a new three-year term in office.

The MEA General Assembly held its meeting in Beirut on Wednesday, June 21 and opened its session with one minute of silence for company employees killed during the recent events in Lebanon.

Sheikh Alamuddin briefed shareholders and employees on the effects of the Lebanese conflict on the company and its activities and how it succeeded to continue its activities and survive.

"I thank the shareholders for their continuous support for and unshakeable belief in the company and its employees," Sheikh Najib Alamuddin odded in his address to the shareholders. "I also thank our non-Lebanese employees for their loyalty and participation with their fellow Lebanese employees in most of the crucial and difficult events they passed through."

Addressing himself to the Lebanese employees, he concluded his message by saying: "I am proud of your loyalty to Lebanon and to your company, your dedication to your work, your courage and your determinotion to shoulder your responsibilities. Above all, I am proud of your notional sentiments and your unity, which is an example to be emulated. With people like you, Lebanon can rise with strength and pride and enable the Cedar wings to continue providing o bridge to all parts of the world and remain Lebanon's everlasting emblem.

After opproving the items on its agenda, the assembly elected unanimously the Board of Directors to another three year term in office. The new board held its first meeting, during which it unanimously

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

Jordanian dailies, Wednesday, took up the following sub-jects: His Majesty King Hussein's dialogue with the Egyptian press; the priorities which tha Arabs must decide upon; and the importance of building up Arah military power.

AL DASTOUR said that His Majesty the King, in his dialogue with the Egyptian press on 'Tuesday, atarted a new custom in Arab information aiming at a tighter coordination of information among Arab countries.

The King has revealed the truth and spoke openly and with details about Jordan's stand vis-a-vis the Mideast conflict. King Hussein also spoke about the current dangers. the importance of Arab coordination and the rights of Palestinians to the Palestinian so-

The paper said that if Arab leaders would tollow King Hussem's example in holding such open dialogues with the media of different Arab countries, the Arab press would have the chance to provide the Arab public with the truth. Thus, the Arab public, in turn, would he given the chance to prepare itself to play the role expected of it in the face of all future

The paper concluded that the meeting of the King with members of the Egyptian press was a good example, and an assertion, of the role of Arab leadership in belping the press to fulfil its mission.

AL RA'l, in an editorial entitled "The aim and the clear vision," said that the axis which all Mideast problems rotate is the Israeli occupation of Arab lands. The paper said that Israel suffers from what is close to isolation because of Arab action in forcing it to reveal its true, aggressive intentions. The paper posed the question whether Israel. if it continues its current policy. would not surely end up with a more accentuated isolation.

The paper said that despite U.N. condemnations, Israel continues to do exactly as it wants while the Arabs know of Israel's true intentions from an analysis of its policy in the occupied territories. The conclusion reached by the Arabs, the paper said, is that Israel's aim is to further expand. To achieve this aim, Israel seems ready to sacrifice peace and all the values it pretends to cbe-

The paper added that all through this time, the Arabs have continued to ask of the means hy which to acquire their rights -- whether by war, or through the belp of the U.N. or with the belp of big powers -- until the October war almost succeeded in bringing peace ahout hy implementing U.N. Resolution 338 and convening the Geneva conference. However, peace was not implemented and since that day the Arabs bave been arguing whether or not Israel would withdraw from tha occupied territories without the need of an-

The paper noted that if the Arabs hope for peace they ought to decide on priorities. To liberate Arah lands hefore deciding on the territories' Arab dimension, or to define the identity of the future before bringing about this future.

AL SHA'B said that, in his speech to the Knesset, Mr. Menachem Begin bas not added anything new to the usual Israeli allegations. He alleged again that bis country is "ready" to attend the Geneva conference on the basis of U.N. Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338, although he also said that be was not ready to give any concessions to the Arabs. He called for the establishment of Israeli settlements in the occupied territories and went on about Israeli racist lilusions -- four thousand years old -- which allege the "historical rights" of the Jews to

The paper explained that it chose to repeat what Mr. Begin has said because the Arabs should be reminded that regaining their rights requires an Arab will that is able to bave an effect on all tha various fields which are crucial to the success of the national battle.

The paper continued that in order to have such a will, the Arabs now, more than ever, need to build up an Arab st-rength capable of fighting both the battles of war and of pe-

The paper concluded that Arab diplomatic preparations for Geneva do not cancel out or the importance of military preparations, for Arab military preparedness, especially in the confrontation countries, would add to the strength of the Arab position at Gene-va in that it will give the Arabs the power to affect the prospects of establishing peace in

Belgrade Summit raises hopes for improved East-West atmosphere

By Sidney Weiland

BELGRADE, June 22 (R). East and West are engaged in a diplomatic tug-of-war in Belgrade with deep significance for the future of detente.

The stakes are high on botb sides. The detente process is mutually valuable, opening prospects for a steadily improving political climate in which the arms race could be significantly reduced.

With vital interests to protect, both sides are moving cautiously. Neither wants detente to be wrecked.

Two years ago, European, U.S. and Canadian leaders gathered in Helsinki, Finland, for a summit meeting that effectively accepted post-war border-lines set by the Soviet army. Many critics called it a sell-out to the Kremlin.

In return, Soviet Leader Leonid Brezhnev reluctantly endorsed a charter of human rigbts, fought out line by line in stiff backstage bargaining.

The charter, printed in newspapers throughout the Soviet Bloc, gave hope to tens of thousands of East Europeans barred for various reasons from travelling across East-West frontiers.

The detente process, a pro-claimed key plank in Soviet policy, was formalised at the European Security Conference in August 1975, but the buman rights principles agreed at Helsinki have come to haunt Soviet Bloc governments.

Pressed for by the Soviet Union for 28 years and regarded with acute auspicion by some Western policy-makers at the time, the Helsinki conference galvanised a human rights dilemma that existed since World

Former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, bored by the symbolism of Helsinki, dismissed the human rights principles, signed by leaders of 35 states as a piece of paper.

The final act has since become a political testament for dissidents in Eastern Europe. Familles desperate for exit permits have waved it angrily in the faces of Communist offici-

'Kissinger was wrong', says a senior NATO officer. 'The final pact bas kept the Soviet Union and its allies on the run. It has turned into a secret weapon for the West."

The final act is under scrutiny now at Belgrade, at least procedurally, by diplomats from the 35 signatory states who are preparing ground rules for a higher-level second-stage security conference in the Yugo-

In preparatory skirmishing. the West moved quickly on to the attack, forcing the Soviet Bloc into the defensive on the buman rights issue.

The preparatory stage of the Belgrade conference, which began on June 15 and will last about six weeks, seems certain to be shadowed by the emotive symbolism of human rights. Although no substantive debate is planned for the preparatory stage, there is a buman rights nuance in every comma of the agenda and guidelines being written for the autumn conference.

Propaoly in October, junior ministers will begin a painstak-ing analysis of the final act, to determine whether governments have carried out pledges to strengthen security, expand tr-ade, and above all broaden human contacts.

The 15 nations of the NATO alliance are determined to keep the focus firmly on human rights. They are seeking dehating rules that will make it impossible to skirt around the buman rights issue. This will involve a long battle of the agen-

The West is pushing for an open-ended debate, which may last three months, with committees probing deeply into the fulfilment of every clause in each of the final act's three 'baskets".

Taking a procedural lead, the nine-nation European Common Market said it hoped for a 12-week review in the autumn, but was ready to go on talking until a consensus was reached. "We will stay as long as it takes," a British diplomat said.

The Soviet Union prefers generalised dehate and has hinted at new proposals for future East-West cooperation, in fields such as inter-state relations, energy, transport and the en-

Soviet Bloc diplomats are anxious for a firm cut-off date for the full conference. The West says it will fight hard against this, fearing a Communist filibuster that could produce a conference without results.

Under Westero strategy, the conference would end with a firm assessment of achievements so far and would set goals for the future.

The West wants similar review conferences at regular intervals, to check up on progress made, especially in lowering human rights barriers. The Soviet Bloc. feeling harried over human rights, has so far shown no enthusiasm for the

The Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies are expected to try to shift the emphasis to military disengagement; last years Warsaw Pact asked every signatory state to pledge it would not be the first to use was rejected by NATO.

While the West is ready to press hard on buman rights, Western negotiators know there are realistic limits and that Moscow cannot be pushed too

And some governments have hinted Moscow may mount a counter-attack on such issues as unemployment, racial discrimination. Britain's military role in Northern Ireland and Western trade tariffs.

The U.S. delegation says it strive for equal progress on all aspects of the Helsinki declaration as the human rights issue (basket three) is more contentious than the security or trade baskets, this implies a more active thrust on human rights.

Some West European govern-ments believe Mr. Carter has focussed too aggressively on human rights, and this could be counter-productive. West Germany fears Russia. Poland or East Germany could react by limiting possibilities for wouldhe grants.

For this reason, the U.S. is expected to oot for praematic solutions, using measured languaee, and avoiding a show-down that could furn the Russians sour on detente.

As good as money....

Readers of this column who have wondered why it has not appeared for the past three weeks must accept my apologies. The truth is that I have been on a bighly secret mission to Europe, so secret and sensitive, in fact, that I could not entrust it even to my stealthy and very sneaky associates. I had to go myself, and I have brought back a sensational story that I will reveal here for the first time because I feel it is of great concern to the world. But first, as aiways, some background.

It seems to me that two of our world's most recent and important developments have been the growth of a pan-European sentiment and the influx of Arah visitors and wealth into Europe. The pan-European sentiment is already expressed in such things as Eurodollars, or car rental firms called Eurocar. My mission to Europe was to Investigate the imminent wedding between this collective European feeling and the Arab invasion there, and I am now able to report authoritatively that a recent top-secret meeting of European central hank governors has decided that it is time to recognise the new realities of our world hy Introducing into circulation a new unit of financial exchange and wealth called the Eurosheikh.

The introduction of the Eurosheikh has been the result of a compromise among the European states. As none of them are willing to give up the sovereignty of their own money to the dominance of another European currency, they decided to use a new unit of account that is common to them all. They found that the only thing of value that they all share is an influx of wealthy Arabs.

The decision to come up with the Eurosheikh was also found to he convenient because some of the EEC's poorer states, such as England, bad a disproportionately bigh share of Arabs. Thus not only has Europe come up with a new and very stable currency, but it has also simultaneously wiped away the severe economic imbalance among the EEC member states.

The Eurosbeikh will initially have its value pegged to the price of a round-trip London-Bahrain air ticket on the Concorde supersonic airliner. A country in Europe will be able to draw upon the EEC's lending facilities in proportion to the number of Arabs in the country; this number will be determined according to a complex formula that considers permanent Arab residents, students, tourists, absentee real estate owners and transient businessmen. It has also been determined that the continual presence of Arab guerrillas in any country will lower that country's credit-worthiness. Arab journalists, Lockheed salesmen, and other questionable characters will not be included in the formula, as their full value to society has not yet been de-

Because it will now be advantageous for a European country to try and attract as many wealthy Arabs as it can, limits will be placed on the maximum number of Arabs that can be in any single European country at any one time. If this number is exceeded, the country in question will either have to pay a compen-satory tax to the EEC states that are being deprived of their fair share of Arabs, or it will have to take in an equal number of Mexicans, Italian workers. Turkish students and poor Le-banese refugees who do not smoke cigars.

In the event that any single European country tries to corner the market and win for itself all the Arabs in Europe, it will be punished by having to host the Arab League's permanent headquarters for one full year. Before this dire fate befalls the country, it may be given a preliminary warning by being asked to arrange an Arab summit conference.

Non-Arah wealthy visitors to Europe, such Iranians or Venezuelans, will be issued special cards identifying them as reserve currencies to he called Petrosheikhs. If, for example, all the Arabs in Europe suddenly go to the United Statea to visit the newest Disneyland, the Petrosheikhs would fill in for them in Europe to make sure there are no continental financial cr-

In the future, it is envisaged that a Euro-sheikh stock market will be opened, where the individual monetary value of Arabs will be listed, and in which European countries can buy and sell rights to have Arabs live in their coun-

Sweden tackles alleged racial problem

Andrew Young, controversial black U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said recently that Sweden was a racist country -- a remark which President Carter termed "unfortunate" in a statement criticising Young. Is Sweden racist?

By Ross Brown

STOCKHOLM (Gemini) - A cartoon in New In Sweden, a magazine for immigrants, shows a small Swedish girl being ordered out of the bouse wbenever she comes in with a foreign playmate. Finally she brihome a new friend -- a Swedish ogre called "Prejudice" -- and her parents flee in

This is one way of illustrating that, despite its international reputation for tolerance, raclal bias exists in Sweden. Yet whether Swedish prejudice is worse than it is elsewhere is impossible to judge.

Sweden, comparatively isolated and with no colonial past, has bad vastly different experiences in meeting other racial or national groups than say. Britain or Canada.

From 1840 to 1930 over one million "poor" Swedes migra-ted, mainly to the U.S. But modern Sweden now has 410,000 resident aliens and 270,000 naturalised Swedes: these people, born outside Sweden, total 10 per cent of the population.

Finns -- some 185,000 of them -- are by far the largest group of immigrants, followed by 41,000 Yugoslavs, 18,000 Greeks, 17,000 Germans, 7,000 Britons, 7,000 Poles, 6,000 Italians and 6,000 Americans, who include deserters from the U.S. military forces in Vietnam. About 35,000 are non-European.

Most of these newcomers have been attracted by Swe-den's high materialistic standard of living. Just after the war many were recruited for the developing of Swedish industry, but nowadays they become part of the work-force known elsewhere as "foreign workers" or "guestworkers".

This immigration is regulated, the controlling factors being the employment authorities and trade unions who advise on the state of the labour mar-

Sweden also accepts around 2,000 refugees annually. In recent years 800 Ugandan Asians have arrived, 2,500 South Americans and 6,000 Turkish Assyrians.

In 1969 Statens Invandrarverk (SIV) the National Immigration and Naturalisation Board was set up to cover work and residence permits, citizenship, and the adjustment of immigrants into Swedish life.

Mamoun Hassan, former secretary of the British Film Institute Production Board, was Director/Editor of this The second sequence shows the refugees in a context of violence, in the aftermath of Israell raids on refugee camps in south Lebanon. The third sequence is shot in Baqa'a Born in Saudi Arabia, Mamoun has spent most of his life in England. He returned to the Middle East in 1974 to assume his post as head of the film branch of camp, north of Amman, which UNRWA's Audio-Visual Division in Beirut. Earlier this Mamoun described as "a cur-lous place, in that Baqa'a is an year, he left UNRWA to take up his new position as emergency camp, a transient place where we see the need head of direction at the National Film School in England. When he was in Amman recently, he gave the Jordan for trees and bricks."

> The fourth sequence of the film was shot in the Israelioccupied territories. Mamoun was not allowed to enter the occupied territories to do the filming. The rest of the crew carried on without him, much to his dismay. Io this part, Vera Tamari, an attractive young Palestinian, gives us a glimpse of life for a people under military occupation.

The film begins with a sce-ne of milk distribution to the Mamoun remembered what refugees. As ked if the film is depressing, Mamoun recalled what another director had said after seeing rad -- himself a Palestinian -it: "Depressing? Why? The people in the film have straight backs ... they have dignity and integrity. The world helps those who help themselves."

Mamoun admitted frankly: "I did come to love the people. I think they are extraor-dinary people!" He has been asked in England if the plight of the refugees is really as bad as is depicted in "Some of the Palestinians". His reply: "No, it's worse." The film is a tragic and impressive report on the lives of Palestinian refugees caught up in a situation with no end in sight, "Realistic" is the word used by people who have first-hand knowledge of the refugees, when they talk about the film.

Mamoun Hossan's feelings for the refugees of the Middle East do not come by chance. He was born in Saudi Arabia in 1937. His father, a Saudi Arabian medical doctor, took his Syrian-born wife and young children to settle in England in 1948. When Mamoun was asked if it were not unusual for a Saudi Arabian to pull up stakes and move so far from home, he smiled and answered: 'My father was a bedouin at heart, and the world was his desert. Most Arabs have a great yearning to travel about and then to stay still. Even I have these yearnings!"

Mamoun and his English wife, Maya, live with their two young children in a town north of Oxford, England. Although he has lived in Eng-land most of his life, people there still make reference to his being an Arab. He is asked many times how he feels his being an Arab can contrib-ute to his work. To this, he can only say that he really doesn't know which part of him is Arab and which part of him is English.

When I become self-conscious, I feel so English in the Arab World and so Arab in England. With friends anywbere, I cease to have a nationality... I feel me."

"Some of the Palestinians" will soon be distributed worldwide. In addition to Arabic, it will be available for T.V. and private viewing in English, French, German, Japanese and

EEC blocks food aid goal proposed at WFC meeting

MANILA, June 22 (R). - European Common Market countries today blocked a proposal that the world community should provide $8.3 billion a year in aid for agricultural projects in developing countries.

Delegates to the United Nations World Food Council me-

Instead of "accepting a goal" of $8.3 hillion, the revised version being drafted today included the figures only as estimates of global needs which are "to be taken into account" by donor countries.

Q.-Somehow or other, our auctions frequently get derailed. I think my problem lies with the first response. Can you give me some guidelines for responding.-R. Levy, Brooklyn, N.Y.

(Tbis question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—The responder bas two main A.—The responder oas two main obligations: To lay the groundwork for describing the strength and shape of his hand, and to announce a fit if ooe exists.

The importance of showing a fit cannot be overemphasized. It encourages opener more than any bid other than a jump shift because it allows him to revalue his haod. Therefore, if you have a choice between a raise of opeoer's suit and some other bid, it is usually correct to raise. Consider this responding hand:

$\Phi Ax \quad \Qxx \quad \Qxx \quad \Phi \quad \quad \quad \phi \quad \qu

Ax VQxx Qxxx $10xxx. You play four-card majors and partner opens the hidding with one heart. What do you respond? The choice is between one no trump and two hearts. Many would respood one no trump because they don't want to raise with only three-card support, lest partner might have opened with only four hearts. Don't let that deter you. The fact that you play four-card majors doesn't har partner from holding five hearts! Indeed, more than half the time that he chooses to open one of a that he chooses to open one of a major be will surely have five cards in the suit.

You have a potential raffing value in spades and three trumps to an honor—fair support by any standards. There is no reason to expect the band to play better at no trump than in a suit contract.

Make your oatural raise to two hearts, the bid that is most likely to improve partner's holding.

If partner opeos one of a minor suit and your hand is worth only one voluntary bid (i.e., you are in the 6-10 point rangel, you should strive to bid a major suit if possible. However, don't take this to be the contract Consider these this to extremes. Consider these two responding hands when partner has opened one club:

• KJxx • xxx • K10xx • xx; or

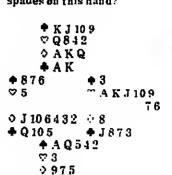

• Qxxx . • xxx • KQ10x . • xx.

With the first band you should respond 1 • Your suit is biddable under any circumstance, and if you respood I > you will be awkwardly placed if partner rebids one heart—a one spade rebid by you would tend to show a better thao minimum response. But with the second hand you should respond one diamond. Your atrength is concentrated in that smit and, if the opponents should buy the hand, you want these few hints will help you im prove your game.

Q.-How would you play six spades on this hand?

During the auction, East preempted in hearts. West lends the five of hearts. East wins the ten and continues with the ace .- P. Simpson, Boston, Mass.

A .- Obviously. West's lead is a singleton, so you must rull with a bigh trump, if trumps divide 2.2, you are home by simply crossruffing your losers, so draw two rounds of trumps with the king jack. When East discards on the second round, you have to about the second round, you have to about the second round. squeeze. For this to succeed, you must find East with four clubs. Cash the ace king of clubs and the three diamonds, coming down to this ending:

When you lead the ten of spades from dummy, East is squeezed. If he discards a heart, you let the ten of spades win and ruff a heart to set up the queen. If East diseards a club, overtake the ten of trumps with the ace and ruff a club in set up the nine In your hand.

European, Arab news agencies argue respective viewpoints in Istanbul

ISTANBUL, June 22 (R). — European and Arab news agency executives argued about politics and the criteria for selecting international news in discussions here yesterday.

Delegates from Syria, Libya ference attended by 35 agencies to discuss cooperation, sug-gested that the press should serve political ends by promoting social development.

But the General Manager of the Dutch news agency ANP, Dr. Jolle Jolles, said: "I can assure you that I am speaking on behalf of other European agencies when I say that we are not political."

The topic was raised in a keynote speech on the second day of the three-day conferen-ce by the General Director of the Italian news agency ANSA, Dr. Sergio Lepri.

The conference, also attended by Soviet and East European agencies, follows the first Arab-European agencies meeting, held in Tunis last Nove-

Dr. Lepri asked whether the press was a medium of information or one of persuasion or propaganda. He contrasted one concept which regarded it as an extension of politics and another which saw it as an industry producing news for consu-mers in much the same way as shoes or toothpaste.

He sald some agencies were controlled by the state, others established as businesses for profit and a third category sunon-profit-making cooperatives. He suggested an exchange of foreign news editors -- work-ing at their counterparts' desks for two or three weeks -- and of monthly reports assessing the quality of services receiv-

The letters, published in the Los Angeles Times today, include one written from London in 1942 which said: "I wish that my powers of expression were such as to make you understand thoroughly -- clearly and for always I've never wanted any other wife -- you're mine and for that reason I've been luckier than any other

The Eisenhower family said it released the letters to counter a book by Lt. Kay Summersby, who served as Ike's driver and private secretary during the years of World War II, and a television film which is soon to be made, based largely on the book. Lt. Summerby's account of her wartime relationship with the general, who later became president of the United States, was published last year under the title: "Past Forgetting: My Love Affair with Dwight D. Eisenbower."

Miss Summersby, who served in the Women's Army Corps (WAC) during the war, died of cancer shortly after writing the book.
